A Local Law to amend the administrative code of the city of New York, in relation to banning the sale of certain candies of a dangerous size.

Be it enacted by the Council as follows:

Section 1. Legislative findings and intent. The Council finds that completely round ball shaped candies that are larger than $\frac{3}{4}$ of an inch in diameter but smaller than $1\frac{3}{4}$ of an inch in diameter pose a danger to children. In May of 2005, two children in New York City died after choking on such candies. According to the United States Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, an estimated 17,537 children aged fourteen and under were treated in U.S. emergency departments for choking episodes in 2001. Candy was associated with 19% of those choking-related emergency department visits.

The Council therefore finds that New York City children must be protected against the dangers of choking on such candies. While the United States Consumer Product Safety Commission has issued regulations banning any plaything intended “for use by children under three years of age if it presents a choking, aspiration, or ingestion hazard because of small parts,” similar regulations have not been issued for candies presenting similar risks. Accordingly, the New York City Council seeks to ban the sale of completely round ball shaped candies that are larger than $\frac{3}{4}$ of an inch in diameter but smaller than $1\frac{3}{4}$ of an inch in diameter to children fourteen years of age and younger, and to warn purchasers of such candy of the dangers presented by providing such candy to such children.

§2. Chapter one of title seventeen of the administrative code of the city of New York is amended by adding a new section 17-190 to read as follows:

f. Rules. The department shall promulgate rules in accordance with the provisions contained in this section, and such other rules as may be necessary for the purposes of carrying out the provisions of this section.
